

Forsyth County
Department of Communications
Release 000274

February 5, 2009
Contact: Jodi B. Gardner
Director of Communications
770.886.2802
JBGardner@forsythco.com

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

FORSYTH COUNTY OFFERS NEW WEB PAGE FOR PLANNING-RELATED INFORMATION

Page features data on rezoning, conditional use permit, home occupation permit and sketch plat applications

FORSYTH COUNTY, Georgia – Forsyth County government has launched a new interactive Web page providing a variety of planning-related information in one, easy-to-navigate location. The new eStatus Web page includes project summaries, important meeting dates and links to important documents, such as applications, aerial maps, concept plans, staff reports and final decision letters. This new feature is accessible at <http://estatus.forsythco.com>.

“We are excited about this new Web page that will make finding and reviewing planning-related information easier for our residents,” Director of Planning and Development Jeff Chance said. “The eStatus Web page is a great tool for citizens to use to help them stay informed about requests and proposed changes in the community.”

The eStatus Web page includes information regarding all existing and archived rezoning, conditional use permit, home occupation permit and sketch plat applications. Plans call for the site to be expanded to include the remaining public hearing application types, as well as information on all land development permits and plats, in the coming year.

When using the eStatus Web page, the most important piece of information needed is the application number. The application number can be found on legal ad notices in the newspaper, adjacent property owner letters, meeting agendas and minutes, and on orange and yellow public notice signs. Once the appropriate application number is identified, visit the new Forsyth County eStatus Web page to find out more information.

-more-

###